It provides information on what constitutes sexual harassment, the preventive measures being implemented, and the fair procedures in place to address any incidents. 11. Conciliation and Settlement

At the request of the aggrieved person, the ICC may attempt to reach a settlement between the parties, but no monetary settlement can be made based on conciliation.

12. Inquiry process (Internal Complaints Redressal mechanism shown in Annexure-I)

12.1. Promptly addressing complaints of sexual harassment is crucial. Generally, the inquiry should be completed and acted upon as soon as possible after receiving a written complaint.

12.2. The Internal Complaints Committee (ICC) will conduct an inquiry and allow both the complainant and the respondent to present their cases and provide explanations.

12.3. When a complaint is received, the ICC should follow the following procedure:

a) The ICC, as advised by the Chairperson, initiates an inquiry promptly after receiving the written/email complaint.

b) The ICC conducts separate inquiries with the complainant and the respondent, seeking detailed information and explanations.

c) The proceedings of the inquiry should be documented, either through minutes or video recordings, and saved by the ICC. The witness's submissions should be recorded on camera.

d) After receiving the inquiry report, the ICC reviews it and may order a full investigation into the complaint if deemed necessary.

e) Upon receiving a complaint, the ICC should ask the complainant about their expectations from the ICC and inform them about the option of conciliation with the respondent. However, once the inquiry is initiated, conciliation is no longer an option.

f) The ICC studies the findings and addresses the complaint according to the policy and the law, aiming to resolve it within ninety (90) days of receiving the complaint. The ICC submits detailed findings and recommendations to the respective employer.

g) If the complainant fails to appear before the ICC or respond to their queries for three consecutive events, the ICC may close the inquiry, stating the reasons for closure. If the respondent deliberately avoids appearing before the ICC, the employer or their appointee should instruct them to appear.

h) Subsequently, the ICC presents its decision, including all collected evidence (such as signed statements from the complainant, respondent, witnesses, and any relevant objects), along with a recommendation to the HR head of the business.

i) If there are no eyewitnesses, the ICC may make a determination on a sexual harassment claim based on the credibility of at least nine committee members. Circumstantial evidence also plays a significant role in the committee's decision-making process.

j) The employer may seek clarification from the ICC regarding the recommendation and must implement it.

k) The final decision is communicated to both the complainant and the respondent.

l) An inquiry into a complaint may proceed or continue even if police proceedings are initiated in connection with the same complaint.

12.4 However, no monetary settlement shall be made as a basis of conciliation.

The inquiry committee or its members should be prepared to handle the complainant's feelings of embarrassment and anger by patiently and firmly explaining the necessary details and documentation required for an accurate inquiry.

- 13.1. The complainant should be interviewed first to promptly identify crucial details, witnesses, and any provided material objects, which should be received, numbered, and preserved.
- 13.2. It is essential for the ICC to maintain objectivity and avoid judgment while allowing the respondent to respond to each allegation. The ICC should inform the respondent about the potential disciplinary actions that may be taken if the complaints are found to be true.
- 13.3. Both parties should be instructed to refrain from contacting each other, and measures to minimize contact should be implemented.
- 13.4. If the complainant has filed a complaint against their reporting manager or someone in a higher position, during the inquiry process, the complainant may choose to: a) Request a transfer; OR b) Take a maximum of three months of leave from employment.
- 13.5. The complainant should report any further incidents of harassment or retaliation that occur during the inquiry.
- 13.6. To maintain confidentiality as per the policy, witnesses should be provided with minimal information about the details of the complaint.
14. Professional Consequences of Violation Violations of the harassment policy will result in appropriate disciplinary action. False complaints or malicious intent may lead to disciplinary actions against the complainant. Retaliation for reporting harassment is strictly prohibited.
15. Conclusion
AEC aims to provide a supportive and healthy work environment where employees and students can excel. This policy ensures a safe and comfortable workplace, fostering employee well-being and optimal performance.

- Monetary settlement cannot be made on the basis of such conciliation. In case a settlement has been arrived at, the ICC shall record it and forward it to the Company to take action as specified in the recommendation of the ICC.
- The Internal Complaints Committee will also provide copies of the settlement as recorded to the Complainant and the Respondent.
- If conciliation has been reached, the IC will not be required to conduct any further inquiry.

- If the complainant or the respondent fails to attend a personal hearing before the IC on three consecutive dates without sufficient cause, the IC shall have the right to terminate the inquiry proceedings or give an ex-parte decision.
